IT SCREAMS! Whitesburg, Letcher County, Kentucky, Thursday, August 20, 1964 Vol. 57, No. 15

Area bill ready for vote

The Rules Committee of the U. S. House of Representatives approved the Appalachian Recovery Act today and cleared it for action on the floor of the House.

The committee's action puts the bill in position for a vote by the House at any time.

The committee gave the mea-

Two not voting

Only four of Whitesburg's six city councilmen were present and voting when the group enacted the controversial "right-to-work" ordinance last week.

Present and voting for the ordinance were Councilmen Dr. Lee Moore, Russell Price, Troy Stallard and Don Crosthwaite.

Councilmen Bill Fields and Wesley Riley were absent.

sure new life after a series of off-again, on-again maneuvers that one day left the bill seemingly dead for the current session, and the next brought it to life again.

The committee eliminated the proposal in the Act for a pasture improvement plan and beef cattle industry in the Appalachian area, thus removing objections of some cattle state representatives, who said there was no need for more cattle in an already-glutted market.

The committee has broadened the highway provisions in the original act by proposing to spend more money than had been asked by the President's Appalachian Regional Commission for a system of "developmental" highways in the Appalachian mountain region. The committee also has written in a provision banning development of public power in Appalachia.

Both the House and the Senate have held lengthy hearings on the Appalachian bill, which has drawn criticism as a "political boondoggle" from Republicans and from some conservative Democrats. The Senate Public Works Committee, which has charge of the bill in the Senate, has not acted on it yet.

Banks candidate

Bert H. Banks of the Cowan area said today he is a candidate for the Letcher County Board of Education.

The district is now represented by Kerney Day.

Lake contract given

Frankfort, -- The State has awarded a $22,330 contract to Gentry Construction Co., Whitesburg, for construction of a dam and lake at Kingdom Come State Park in Harlan County, the Department of Finance announced today.

The lake will provide a water supply for the new park being developed near Cumberland by the Department of Parks. Gentry offered the lowest of the bids on the project opened July 21 by the Finance Department. Planning and designing of the project was handled by the Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources.

Work will start within about 10 days and is scheduled to take 120 days.

Also planned is a road to extend the existing road into the park to a connection with the Little Shepherd Trail at the top of Pine Mountain. The 1,000-acre park's name honors the locale of "The Little Shepherd of Kingdom Come," written by John Fox Jr., a Kentuckian.

Park facilities now include picnic tables and playground equipment.

Pay safe

A proposal for cutting wages of service employees of the Whitesburg Hospital has been withdrawn after meetings between officials of Appalachian Regional Hospitals Inc., District 50 of the United Mine Workers of America and an arbitrator from the U. S. Department of Labor.

Employees at Whitesburg and four other hospitals in Kentucky will work under the three-year contract they signed last Feb. 1.

Workers at the five hospitals in Virginia and West Virginia just acquired by ARHI face a cut in wages, however, and some of them already are striking. The dispute is to be submitted to arbitration.

ARHI officials have said a wage cut is essential to assure continued operation of the hospitals, which otherwise face a deficit in the coming year.

Right to work at low pay

The Whitesburg City Council made what we regard as a serious mistake this past week when it adopted the notorious "right-to-work" law--a city ordinance clearly designed to halt union activity within the city limits.

The city acted, apparently, in the vague hope that by taking a firm anti-union stand the city can persuade industry to come to town. Specifically, the town seems to think it might land itself a garment factory, and that this would be a step toward progress.

But do we really want garment factories or any other industry geared to the abuse of employees, the payment of the lowest possible minimum wages? Can we build a town, an economy, on an industry paying only $1.25 an hour? We think not.

Low wages produce poor communities with poor schools, poor governments, a poor environment. Persons earning the minimum wage can't afford new cars, new clothes, new houses. They are doomed to a life of misery and poverty, and the so-called right-to-work law would do nothing but seal their doom, make certain their lives of poverty, by preventing them from using the only weapon an industrial worker has to fight for a better way--a union.

There are several studies which show quite clearly that states and cities throughout the country which in recent years have adopted the right-to-work law are falling significantly behind national average wage scales. Studies show that such places as Atlanta, Georgia, which paid average wages close to national averages before Georgia adopted a right-to-work law, have seen average wages and the Atlanta economy decline since passage of the act to the point that Atlanta no longer is one of the pace setters in the national economy.

The situation in Eastern Kentucky of course is different. With only about half our total labor force employed in positions paying adequate wages, and with the other half existing directly or indirectly because of state and federal welfare programs, the need for new industry is obvious, and the pressures and temptations to try anything, including a right-to-work ordinance, are great.

But as an area we are in great danger of making permanent our present economic situation by writing into law guarantees that this will continue to be a low-wage area.

It is the union miner with his take-home pay of $5,000 a year who is the Letcher County man who regularly buys new cars, new television sets, new clothes, new appliances. His $10-a-day counterpart in the non-union truck mines cannot afford these things.

To replace this union coal miner and his buying power with a $1.25-an-hour housewife working in a garment factory is not progress.

Eastern Kentucky wants and needs industry, of course. But it needs industry that is willing to build the area and not tear it down. We don't want and don't need the type of industry that thinks it can come in and take advantage of the people of the area simply because they are out of work and in great need.

And there are a number of fly-by-night firms resembling vultures which have been sharpening their claws in anticipation at the prospect of coming into the area with federal or state-financed factories and machinery and low wage, anti-union protection from the towns, to make themselves wealthy from the sweat of the downtrodden of Eastern Kentucky who would be forced to accept slave wages because nothing else would be offered.

City council's action was hasty, taken without any public notice, without any opportunity for the working man and the working woman--the persons most affected--to express their wishes or desires. We hope it will reconsider.

Barryer

One of the more disgusting shows now being put on in the nation is that which is occurring in Washington, where Sen. Barry Goldwater and like-minded individuals are saying in substance that the United States government will fall victim to communism if Uncle Sam builds some highways in Eastern Kentucky.

Goldwater and the others who seek to block the Appalachian Recovery Act don't put it in those words, exactly. But the Republicans have pulled every trick they know how to pull--and they are numerous--in their all-out effort to prevent the federal government from coming to the aid and comfort of the tens of thousands of Eastern Kentuckians who think they are entitled to such things as flood control and highways.

And while the Republicans go all-out in their opposition to spending a measly billion dollars in the 10-state Appalachian area, they are loud in their praise of Goldwater's plan for Uncle Sam to spend far more than a billion dollars on a TVA-like recovery program for the pauper state of Arizona.

Uncle Sam's dirty money breeds socialism, waste, a welfare state and no-good people when it is spent in Eastern Kentucky, argues Goldwater. But Uncle Sam simply is making an investment in the great American system of free enterprise when he invests in Arizona.

For Eastern Kentucky, the issue is clear. If Barry Goldwater has his way, the Appalachian program will be killed, and no money will be spent to rebuild state and federal highways in this area. No money will be spent on flood control. There will be no Appalachian program and the area will be doomed to listening to platitudes from Barry instead of working at jobs from LBJ.

And all the while, we in Eastern Kentucky will be watching our tax money go out to Arizona for the creation of another TVA, designed to provide cheap electricity and palatable drinking water for Arizona millionaires who dream of becoming President.

CURRENT COMMENT

"The varied subregions of Appalachia share an unhappy distinction: Rural Appalachia lags behind rural America; urban Appalachia lags behind urban America; and metropolitan Appalachia lags behind metropolitan America."

LETTERS to the EDITOR

Right-to-work

To the editor:

This is the first letter I have ever written to any paper, but after reading the Mountain Eagle last week, I felt I must speak out.

I read the article about the City Council of Whitesburg passing a right-to-work law, and I would like to ask the merchants of Whitesburg one question. Since when has Whitesburg been so prosperous that they could afford to offend and lose the union man's trade?

My family and I have spent a good many dollars at Whitesburg all our lives, but now, unless some change is made, we will trade elsewhere. Oh yes, you may see us there, but only to pay our taxes and trade at the A&P.

I am pretty sure all merchants do not agree with this law, but they better speak up, and not let one or a few men decide things for them.

Another thing I would like everyone in the county to think about. When you go against the honest union man or woman, you are not against a stranger or an outsider, but possibly a good friend, next door neighbor, or even your brother or sister in the church. These people were born and raised here, and don't forget their decent paycheck can be spent anywhere.

Yours truly,
NAME WITHHELD BY REQUEST

Clean-up needed

To the editor:

Are we going to let our town remain, as it is, in its present plight, with one of the most up-to-date courthouses in the state soon to be completed? Shame! Let's quit dragging our feet in filth, and declare a new day for town, and our county.

No greater ornament could our government present to us than our courthouse will be. Let's show our respects to both our government and this beautiful building by cleaning up our town. Good citizens lead the way, and hope the officials will join you.

Let's not let the "almighty dollar" blind us to a decent and moral life.

Let's begin our cleanup by cleaning up ourselves first. Let's make ourselves a model. To clean up doesn't mean just to clean up our back yard, it means to clean our entire person, our way of thinking, our speech and our way of living.

In speaking of the Mountain Parkway, Luther Hodges, secretary of commerce, said, "The Appalachian region wasn't ready for such highways. They should clean up first." How true!

Now, the state and the United States government are doing their part, when will we start doing our part?

Interested in area

To the editor:

Kindly enter my subscription for The Mountain Eagle, for which my check is enclosed.

You don't know me. I don't know anyone in Letcher County. I have never been there in person. But I have a good friend who has. He is Gordon Ebersole. We have discussed the present challenge and ultimate opportunity of the mountain region. Therefore, through a common friend, we do know each other.

Years ago, when a struggling school teacher, I was secretary to my small town (very small town, it was!) Chamber of Commerce in the dust-blown scablands of the Grand Coulee. The Dam and the Columbia Basin Project were then only in the dream stage. I sat enthralled for many hours, during the depths of the Depression of the early 30's, with those rural prophets, Rufus Woods, Frank McCann, Gale Matthews, Billy Clapp, Jim O'Sullivan, and others, spinning out this dream, and calculating how the idea could be communicated to others. We collected a dollar here, a quarter there, to send an emissary to Washington to plead our cause. Usually organized opposition interests, learning of our scheme, would seek to buy him off or make his trip fruitless at the Washington end. We were buffeted by waves of scornful criticism, and laughed at as impractical dreamers. One leading national magazine lampooned the project, saying the air of the Grand Coulee was acrid with the dust of deadmen's bones--and should be left that way. To my remonstrative letter, the editor curtly replied that the article was the truth; besides, it was the policy of the publication to make its readers aware. Today, a third of a century later, the dam and the project are a reality. The names of Frank and others of those rural prophets probably not appear in books--and they would care. Most of them in fulfillment of this dream their lifetimes; others great project authorized doubt viewed, in their eye, the finished project gratitude akin to that he viewed afar off the leys of Canaan, this people.

What do I want with Well, after reading it will pass it along to my fellow Americans, know, and feel persons Appalachia. It is a I believe one of the problems among people is communication. The just doesn't get through in some small way I interest a few of my friends and they in turn others. Meanwhile keep that ing!

Garbage rules

To the editor:

I would like to know about the garbage collection of the City of Whitesburg.

Why is it that the garbage hauler will haul any kind of some people and refuse the same type for others?

Why is it that the garbage hauler will haul ashes all winter for some people and not haul them for others?

I brought two garbage cans home to use for my store--where I pay to have garbage hauled--and the men refused to take them because they were home!

Does the city have written or unwritten rules about garbage collection, and what are they? Everybody to know, and they ought to be enforced for all alike.

AVERAGE FAMILY OF CAMPER'S SPENDS $158 IN KENTUCKY

Frankfort, --- How much will that family of campers you meet on the highway spend in Kentucky?

About $158.47, according to a survey by a Louisville research firm.

At the request of the Kentucky Department of Public Information, Market Research Associates, Louisville, conducted personal interviews with 78 parties of campers chosen at random in two State parks on a recent week end.

The survey revealed:

*The average camping party consisted of 4.8 persons, ranging from a low of two to a high of 12 persons.

*The campers planned an average stay of 6.4 days, ranging from a low of one day to a high of 21 days.

*The average camping party spent $158.47 with local vendors and businessmen, an average of $24.76 per party per day. Each individual camper spent an average of $33.20 in Kentucky during his camping trip.

Eighteen states were represented in this total, with 27 parties, or 35 per cent, from Ohio.

Kentucky ranked second with 18 groups, or 23 per cent, and Indiana third with 10 groups, or 13 per cent. The remaining groups of campers were from widely scattered areas and were from as far away as New York, New Jersey, Texas, and Colorado.

Their average expenditure of $24.76 per day per camping group varied from a high of $6.44 per day for groceries to 54 cents for personal services (doctors, dentists, barber shops, beauty shops, etc.).

Surprising was the $4.91 per group daily average for fees and admissions to certain park facilities and to neighboring communities' museums, zoos, movies, and other attractions. Likewise surprising was the $4.01 daily average per group for gifts, novelties and souvenirs.

Cost of items purchased ranged from a $75 guitar and $45 necklace bought in London to 10¢ toys. Purchase of drug store and clothing store items were frequently listed.

The survey included campers chosen at random in mid-July at Levi Jackson State Park near London and at General Burnside Island State Park at Burnside. Comments included liberal praise for Kentucky State parks' clean, modern camping facilities and attractive camping sites and for the courtesy of park personnel.

Many campers reported that they made the parks their home base from which to "sightsee all over the nearby country."

In addition to statistics, the survey racked up an observation or two on the trend of the times:

A vast majority of those interviewed said they chose a "camping vacation" to "get out in the wide-open" and to "get away from everything."

A number had brought books to read but many volunteered that they were purposely not to or reading any new

Interviewers were how to list at least one purchase:

During an interview with a couple from a Southern state, wife noted the cost of a sweater she had bought as $10. Interviewers departed, followed a little way by "I really paid more for a sweater, but I haven't been the news to my husband."

Later the interviewers husband on the golf course.

"I'm pretty sure my sweater is worth more than 10 bucks for a sweater," he said. "To how women are on a sweater."

Last year, a record 186,022 campers from 12 foreign countries, 12 foreign countries, the District of Columbia, Kentucky State park campsites.

Campers at Mammoth National Park and Cumberland Gap National Park and privately-owned camping areas the total.

This year's prospect is larger, according to Public Information Commissioner Lou Miller.

"Vacation camping is ing throughout the nation has already become a financial factor in Kentucky's 1st industry," Miss Miller said. "This survey begins to potential of vacation as an income source for Kentucky."

ABOUT UNUSUALLY COLD WEATHER, CHAMPION POTATO GROWERS. AND THE WAY TO TELL TURNIP-PLANTING

By MABEL KISER

Millstoners are shivering under the coldest wave in August that old timers can remember. The thermometer dropped to 43 degrees last Wednesday.

Billy Stamper is home after a seven-week vacation with relatives in Cleveland. While there they visited in New York and spent a week in Canada. In Canada he visited a Canadian Indian Reservation. He was the first Kentuckian ever to visit this Reservation in Schawan.

Mrs. Robert Pannel of Payne Gap has been a patient in the Whitesburg Hospital for several days. Mrs. Pannel is a sister-in-law of Elmer Sexton.

Dorothy Caudill has returned home for school after spending the summer in Indianapolis with her folks.

Lee and Betty Jo Watson visited Aunt Dub last week end.

Road bids to be taken the goingest people go Royal Crown®

Employees of Royal Crown Bottling Company at Whitesburg, Hazard, Jackson, Robinson Creek and Wise, Va., got together at the firm's bottling plant at Ermine earlier this month for their annual picnic.

Several hundred employees, families and friends attended the gathering. Each employee received an uncirculated Kennedy half dollar from the company's officials. Traditionally silver dollars have been given but the coin shortage this year made silver dollars impossible to find.

The food was plentiful and was spread on long tables inside the warehouse at Ermine. Some of the wives (right) helped to lay it out. Each family brought something to contribute to the potluck lunch.
